Emancipation, Regulation, Collaboration; how the First World War changed the Dutch book trade

Type: Master thesis
Title: Emancipation, Regulation, Collaboration; how the First World War changed the Dutch book trade
Author: Koster, J.G.
Issue Date: 2016-08-31
Keywords: Book, Dutch book trade, First World War
Abstract: This study deals with the effects of the war on printing, publishing and bookselling in the Netherlands. In a time in which society was changing fast, the book trade witnessed new legislation and increasing regulation, as well as more collaboration between the government, employers and employees to create better conditions, while actions were undertaken to limit the negative effects of the war.

Supervisor: Hoftijzer, P.G.
Faculty: Faculty of Humanities
Department: Media Studies (Master)
Specialisation: Book and Digital Media Studies
ECTS Credits: 20
Handle: http://hdl.handle.net/1887/42623

Files in this item

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Size</th>
<th>View</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Master thesis; body</td>
<td>1.581Mb</td>
<td>View/Open</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cover Master Thesis</td>
<td>308.7Kb</td>
<td>View/Open</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

THIS ITEM APPEARS IN THE FOLLOWING COLLECTION(S)

- Media Studies

Emancipation Proclamation, first reading
The first reading of the Emancipation Proclamation, engraving by A.H. Ritchie, 1866. Seated from left to right: Secretary of War Edwin M. Stanton, Pres. Its international importance was far greater. The locking up of the world's source of cotton supply had been a general calamity, and the Confederate government and people had steadily expected that the English and French governments would intervene in the war. The conversion of the struggle into a crusade against slavery made European intervention impossible. American Civil War: African American soldiers Overview of African American soldiers' involvement in the American Civil War. © Civil War Trust.